Diplomats Report Israel, Arabs Renew Arms Race

Israel and the United Arab Republic are renewing their arms race, according to diplomatic reports from the Middle East. The Israelis find that quantitatively the U. A. R. forces have about regained what they lost in the 1956 war. The Israelis destroyed great quantities of Egyptian arms in Sinai, the triangular peninsula that forms the eastermost part of Egypt.

Israel is less worried about the quantitative than about the qualitative growth of President Gamal Abdel Nassor's air, ground, and sea power, says the New York Times. The Israelis feel that the increase in the United Arab Republic's strength in relation to that of Israel results from the increasing skill of the Egyptians and Syrians in using the weapons they have received from the Soviet bloc.

In November, 1956, Soviet-bloc weapons in Egypt, received under an agreement signed in September, 1955, were brand new and Syria had not yet joined Egypt in the United Arab Republic.

Cairo officials have been citing Premier David Ben-Gurion's statement before the Knesset (Parliament) during the summer, that purchases to repair Israel's deficiency in certain military weapons were being arranged with "the only country in the world where we were able to obtain part of the equipment."

Diplomats report that United Arab Republic officials believe French jet aircraft and tanks are involved. The Cairo officials are said to fear these are late models superior to what they have received from the Communist bloc.

Meanwhile, four U. S. Republican Senators, in a letter to Secretary of State Christian A. Herter, urged that the United States oppose the United Arab Republic's candidacy for a seat on the United Nations Security Council, says the New York Times. Senators Hugh Scott, of Pennsylvania; Clifford P. Case, of New Jersey; and Jacob K. Javits and Kenneth B. Keating, of New York, wrote that "the head of the United Arab Republic, President Nasser, is engaged in an attempted 'power grab' in the Middle East and Africa with the aid of his Communist allies."

They said other countries should be made "fully aware of the intensity of feeling in the United States against President Nasser's illegal actions." Thus, they added, the United States might prevent the United Arab Republic from gaining "a position which implies power and prestige, and that it has no moral right to receive, and which the world should not give it."

Although Israel is making an effort to maintain her armed strength, Foreign Minister Golda Meir, in a recent speech before the United Nations General Assembly, urged that Premier Ben-Gurion and President Nasser meet to discuss peace and disarmament.

The Israelis point out that most major weapons in the Middle East come from the great powers of the West and the East, and that these powers seem unlikely to agree on limiting their arms shipments. The only way the Middle Eastern countries can protect themselves, the Israelis contend, would be to agree on some form of limitation and mutual inspection, and then to confront the great powers with their agreement.

The Israelis have been talking about an agreement banning "offensive" weapons and limiting the quantity and firepower of imports, says the New York Times.

To the charge that Israeli offers of direct talks with the Arabs are nothing new and have always proved illusory, the Israelis reply that their disarmament plan established Israel's moral position while it seeks to redress the balance of power in the Middle East.

They say that the United States has similarly established its moral

U. S. Tells Israel And Arabs To Use U.N. Help To Peace

The United States told Israel and the Arab nations to make greater use of the United Nations conciliation commission for Palestine in an attempt to settle the problem of Arab refugees from Israel.

Francis O. Wilcox, speaking in the Special Political Committee, said that "during the last several years the governments concerned directly with the Palestine refugee problem have not utilized the commission by proposing possible solutions." He urged all member states to put their ideas about the refugees before the commission which consists of the United States, France, and Turkey.

Hassan Salah El-Din Gohar of the United Arab Republic told the committee that the refugees from Israel had come to distrust all plans to resettle them in Arab countries outside their former homes. He blamed Israel for defying General Assembly resolutions calling for repatriation and compensation for the refugees.

Only repatriation, said the representative of the United Arab Republic, would satisfy the mass of the refugees. Meanwhile, he urged, revision of the relief rolls should proceed, says the New York Times. Many refugees, he explained, were denied rations and assistance. The terms for relief, drafted several years ago, should be expanded, he said.

Scientists Uncover Biblical City In Jordan

Archaeological excavations at Shechem, Israel's first capital, have established that the Biblical Abimelech reigned briefly about 1150 B.C., Harvard University said. Abimelech touched off a revolution in the ancient city when he tried to establish himself as Israel's first king. The scene is described in the Book of Judges, ix, 45, in these words:

"And Abimelech fought against the city all that day; and he took the city, and slew the people that were therein, and beat down the city, and sowed it with salt." Not content with that carnage, the king roasted alive 1,000 men and women who had taken refuge in a tower of the city.

A team of American scholars working in the largest American archaeological project in the Holy Land have established the date of the story, says the New York Times. It is a part of the 4,000 year record of the city's life that is buried in a twenty-five-acre mound near the present-day village of Balatah, Jordan.

The purpose of the expedition, which has just returned from a summer's work at Shechem is the same as that of other archaeological projects in the Holy Land — to relate Biblical history to known events in ancient history.

The excavation at the ancient city was under the direction of Prof. G. Ernest Wright, of the Harvard Divinity School; Prof. Lawrence E. Toombs, of Drew University, in Madison, N.J.; and Prof. Edward F. Campbell, of McCormick Theological Seminary in Chicago.

Drew, McCormick, and the American Schools of Oriental Research sponsored the expedition. Others supporting the project include the Rockefeller Foundation in New York; the Semitic Museum at Harvard; the Southern Baptist Theological Seminary, in Louisville, Ky.; and Concordia College, in River Forest, Ill.

Shechem flourished during ancient Egyptian and Biblical times. The city was a stronghold of an empire ruled from Egypt when Abraham and Jacob visited it during their travels through the land. During this period, Shechem's inhabitants first built a massive temple-fortress, a thirty-five-foot high main wall around the city, and two great city gates.

In the thirteenth century B.C., Israelites under Joshua conquered the land after it had been in Egyptian hands for 400 years. After the death of King Solomon, all Israel assembled at Shechem to make Solomon's son Rehoboam king, says the New York Times. But tribes of Israel revolted and formed the Northern Kingdom of Israel with Shechem as its first capital. Later the Samaritans attempted to make Shechem the rival of Jerusalem.

The temple-fortress in Shechem, destroyed by Abimelech, was first uncovered by a German expedition in 1926. The building was about seventy by eighty-five feet, with walls that were seventeen feet thick. Following the German discovery of the building, its purpose and date became controversial. But the leaders of the new expedition believe that the temple is the site destroyed by Abimelech and the time has now been pinpointed at about 1150 B.C.

The calculation was made on the basis of pottery fragments found in the ruins. Many fragments of typical twelfth century B.C. Hebrew pottery were found, but not a trace of Philistine pottery (which is found at other ancient sites in Israel) of the period between 1150 and 1000 B.C. when the Philistines conquered much of the Holy Land.

The expedition also discovered that three buildings mentioned in the biblical account — the "house of Baal-berith," the "house of Millo", and the "tower of Shechem" — are the same. All three names refer to the great temple-fortress. During the revolt against Abimelech, he was struck by a stone. But he destroyed the city and set fire to the temple-fortress before he died.

The expedition this summer picked a spot previously untouched by archaeological investigations and began to peel back layers of earth containing the remains of ancient houses built successively on the same site, says the New

Negro Singer Gets Jewish "Woman Of The Year Award"

Miss Marian Anderson, American singer and former member of the United States delegation to the United Nations, received the "Woman of the Year" award of the National Women's Division of the American Friends of the Hebrew University in Jerusalem. At a ceremony at the Waldorf-Astoria the United Nations representatives of a dozen new Asian and African states were present. This led Miss Anderson to say:

"It is a joyous thing to live in this time, when so many of the things we have long known to be right have at last come to pass, and we are, indeed, our brother's keeper."

Gov. Rockefeller and Michael Comay, Israeli representative at the United Nations, were among those who praised Miss Anderson's achievements, says the New York Herald Tribune. "Her magnificent voice," Gov. Rockefeller said, "has become a medium of communication, her achievements symbols of peaceful progress among all the peoples of the world."

Mr. Comay announced that a Marian Anderson United Nations document reading room would be installed in the library on the new campus of the Hebrew University in Jerusalem. The National Women's Division of the Hebrew University announced a campaign to raise $1,000,000 for the library. Mrs. Louis S. Gimbel jr., national president, presided at the fund "kick-off," to which $30,000 were pledged. Seven hundred women were present.

German Youth Learns About Hitler Era From Six-Month TV

The ranting voice of Adolf Hitler is being heard again in millions of German homes every other Friday night for the next half-year.

It is being broadcast, along with original newsreels of the Fuehrer in action, as the key ingredient of an unprecedented series of twenty-six television programs called "The Third Reich" and aimed primarily at telling Germany's younger generation the truth about the Nazi era, says the New York Herald Tribune. The broadcasts are each fifty minutes long.

The first of the series, showing Hitler's rise to power, was transmitted from 8:25 p.m. to 9:15 p.m., which is prime TV time in Germany, as elsewhere. More than 4,000,000 German families have TV sets.

The audience which is expected to watch this marathon, estimated at from 8,000,000 to 15,000,000 persons, will far exceed the total number of Germans who have bought tickets to see documentary films of the Nazi era, including this year's box-office success, "Mein Kampf," a grueling Swedish-edited recapitulation of Nazi horrors.

This time, besides the huge length of the documentation, the fundamental new element is that the broadcasts will hit the solar plexus by reaching into the family circle, where, in a great many cases, German youths are unable to get a straight answer from their parents about the Nazi period.

It is the stated objective of the television men who originated and executed the task of editing 600,000 yards of Nazi films to achieve precisely this objective: To prevent the older generation from drawing a curtain of silence over the past.

The producer of the program said: "This is entirely necessary in our division, is dedicated to making clear to the younger generation the circumstances which led our Fatherland to catastrophe. The programs are also directed, of course, to those who were old enough to have experienced those twelve years."

So far, the German press has been sympathetic, says the New York Herald Tribune. "De Mittag" of Duesseldorf remarked that some German youths may still get the wrong explanations from their parents as they sit in front of the TV set, but the impact of the series will nevertheless not be lost.

However, it is too early to gauge the full public reaction. Two young people with whom the Herald Tribune reporter watched the first program seemed rather bored. Only politeness prevented them from leaving before it was over. In a near-by Bonn beer tavern, the reaction of an audience of a dozen men of various ages was apathetic.

What, then, did the first fifty minutes of the series consist of? A remarkable succession of newsreels from the early 1920s through Hitler's consolidation of power in 1933, punctuated with dozens of vivid photographs and clearly projected front pages of newspapers of that era.

The key players in the disaster seen in action: from President Hindenburg, Gen. Schleicher, Alfred Hugenberg, Franz von Papen to Goering, Hess, Goebbels, Himmler and the murdered Capt. Roehm of the S.A. and, time and again, Hitler raving, shouting, threatening, bullying at Nurenberg, Munich, including the extraordinary scene at which he rammed the fatal enabling act through the ill-fated Reichstag.

Every scene was accompanied by a rapid-fire commentary, explaining to the younger generation just who a lot of these men were, and how Hitler, step by step, smashed the resistance that was raised against him from one or another quarter of an infeebled German democracy.

Is the commentary exact and objective? The reporter found that it inclined somewhat to the ultra-simple view that all the devils in pre-Hitler German politics were on the Right wing: the Nationalists, the industrialists, the aristocrats, says the New York Herald Tribune. If anything, the commentary appears to have an anti-big business bias.

W.J.C. Presses Austria To Indemnify Victims Of Nazis

Dr. Nehemiah Robinson, of New York, director of the World Jewish Congress Institute of Jewish Affairs, went to Vienna for meetings with the Austrian Government in an effort to conclude negotiations for the indemnification of Austrian Jewish victims of Nazism. About 80,000 persons all over the world are involved. Dr. Robinson, who is the leading world authority on indemnification and restitution matters, accompanied Dr. Nahum Goldmann, president of the Committee for Jewish Claims on Austria, in meetings with Austrian Government leaders in New York.

For many years Dr. Goldmann and his colleagues in the Committee on Austria and the Executive of the World Jewish Congress have been pressing the Austrian Government for legislation to indemnify Austrian Jewish victims of Nazism in the same way as the German Federal Republic. Last spring Dr. Goldmann met with the Chancellor, Vice-Chancellor, and other Austrian Ministers and received assurances that during the summer the necessary legislation would be enacted. This undertaking was not kept and the matter was recently re-opened when Dr. Goldmann headed a delegation that met with the Austrian Foreign and Finance Ministers in New York.

A memorandum with detailed demands was submitted to the Ministers who promised to do all in their power to ensure passage of the necessary legislation within the next few months. The detailed demands presented will be the basis of Dr. Robinson's negotiations with the Austrian Government. The World Jewish Congress Institute of Jewish Affairs, of which Dr. Robinson is the head, is the research and information wing of the global Jewish body.

The North American Executive of the World Jewish Congress has announced the formation of an International Advisory Council to consist initially of Jewish leaders in the Western Hemisphere, but will be extended to include key Jewish figures throughout the world. Samuel Bronfman, of Montreal, chairman of the North American Executive, said that the prime task of the new body would be to support the World Jewish Congress in its broadening area of activity.

The new Council follows the setting up earlier this year of the North American Division and is in line with a general policy to enlist the support of individual Jewish leaders in all of the 63 countries where the World Jewish Congress has affiliated bodies. The North American Division, under the direction of Yehuda Epstein, is now completing formation of a 100-member board which will be responsible for the Division's activities in the United States, Canada, and Mexico.

A warning that the Jewish communities of Latin America must take all possible steps to counter anti-Semitism is contained in a message received in New York by Samuel Bronfman, of Montreal, chairman of the North-American Division of the World Jewish Congress, from Dr. Moisés Goldman, chairman of the South American executive of the World Jewish Congress, with headquarters in Buenos Aires. Dr. Goldman emphasized that the South American Executive must wage "a constant struggle against anti-Semitism and in defense of human rights." These issues will be included in the agenda of a conference of Jewish communities of South America to be held, under World Jewish Congress auspices, in the latter part of 1961, with the participation of delegates from more than a dozen countries. It will also discuss strengthening ties between the various communities of South America.

Tucson Jewish Council Women Help To Open Restaurants To Negroes

As patrons enter 130 of approximately 200 restaurants in Tucson, Arizona, they are greeted by a sign that reads: "People of all races and creeds are welcome provided they conduct themselves in a manner which will make this a pleasant place for all." Not too long ago in Tucson the sign was more likely to read: "We reserve the right to refuse service to anyone."

The transformation was accomplished by the Tucson Section of the National Council of Jewish Women. The 67-year-old educational and welfare service organization has 110,000 members in 240 local Sections throughout the U.S.

The story began in October, 1958, with a citywide survey undertaken by the Council's Tucson Section as part of its community leadership training program. Mrs. Sam L. Rich, one of the two Tucson members most responsible for this triumph, tells what happened: "Quite by chance, I was assigned to the field of community relations and civil liberties, along with Mrs. Berl Greenberg. We interviewed a few people who were qualified to speak for their respective minority groups. But when we interviewed some of our local Negro leaders, we were shocked. We had never realized what injustices were going on under our ignorant noses! Rev. Caspar Glenn (a Negro minister), in particular, fired our imaginations with his story of a Mrs. Gritzner in Mesa, who almost single-handedly managed to convince about 95 per cent of the restaurant owners to open their doors to people of all races . . ."

In their report, Mrs. Rich and Mrs. Greenberg strongly recommended that the Tucson Section undertake a similar project. They received immediate and wholehearted support, and the next few months were spent in careful preparation of the campaign, with many consultations with experienced people and organizations.

"It was two worried housewives who set out last October on their first attempt to break down the barriers of prejudice in our local restaurants," Mrs. Rich recalled. "But much to our surprise, we received a rather encouraging reception. In the few isolated cases in which we were faced with prejudices too violent to budge, we learned to give up easily before further antagonism was aroused. At other times, prejudice took the form of a claw in a silken glove. The slippery, evasive answers soon revealed what we were dealing with. In most cases our brief encounter with this type of restaurant owner does have an educational function. When we force the light of reason into the closed mind of a bigot, we cannot help but ventilate his thoughts."

With the help of several other NCJW members, Mrs. Rich and Mrs. Greenberg have visited almost every restaurant in Tucson. The work of their Section Civil Liberties Committee has been endorsed by the Tucson Council of Churches, the Anti-Defamation League, the Tucson Council of Civic Unity, and the Mayor's Committee on Human Relations. In April, during Good Human Relations Week, the two women were honored by the Dale Carnegie Alumni Association of Tucson, and their work has been noted approvingly by the local press.

But Mrs. Rich and Mrs. Greenberg have not stopped to rest on their laurels. Last June, when Mayor Don Hummel introduced an equal public accommodations ordinance to the City Council, Tucson Section of NCJW became one of a long list of prominent civic organizations that formed a temporary committee called "Impact" (Inter-Organizational Public Accommodations Committee for Tucson) to back the measure. Meanwhile, word of the restaurant project has spread to Northern Arizona and to Los Angeles, where other organizations are considering a similar campaign.

"And then we shall start on the lunch counters," says Mrs. Rich.

● JOINT CAMPAIGN ●

for Combined Jewish Appeal and United Israel Appeal, held its tenth closing dinner in the Windsor Hotel. Allan Bronfman, who was the first chairman of the Combined Jewish Appeal, conducted the ceremony in which each of the nine past chairmen of the Joint Campaign, as well as Arthur Pascal, chairman this year, lit a candle on a tenth anniversary cake. Mr. Bronfman reviewed the theme of the campaign for each particular year and announced the amount of money raised that year. The Joint Campaign was established in 1951 as a united effort by the Combined Jewish Appeal and United Israel Appeal, each of which had been conducting separate drives up to that time. Dr. George J. Strean was the first chairman of the Joint Campaign in 1951, when $2,378,095 was raised. In 1952 the chairman was Morris Moscovitch, who was unable to be present at this closing dinner. The second candle was lit by Monroe Abbey, Q. C., who is now the president of Combined Jewish Appeal and served as a campaign chairman for it in 1942. The third candle was lit by J. J. Block, campaign chairman in 1953; the fourth by Ben Beutel, 1954 chairman. Jack Becker, the 1955 chairman, was represented by his brother, David Becker, who lit the fifth candle. The other candles were lit by: Bernard Lande, chairman in 1956; Samuel Samuelson, in 1957; Max Pascal, in 1958; Percy Caplan, in 1959. The tenth candle was kindled by Arthur Pascal, 1960 general campaign chairman, who reported that the amount raised this year is $3,350,045. The Michael Hirsch Memorial Award for the outstanding campaigner in the 1960 Joint Campaign was presented this year to Joseph Cohen, 3764 Westmount Boulevard, by Percy Caplan, chairman of the Business Men's Council of Combined Jewish Appeal. Mr. Caplan said that Mr. Cohen was the unanimous choice on the basis of his chairmanship of the special assignments committee which brought in increased gifts. Mr. Cohen was also very active in the special names, and trades divisions. The trades plaque award for the chairman of the trades section who achieved the best campaign record was presented jointly to Abe Goldberg, chairman, and Harry Beloff, vice-chairman, of the children's wear section. The Ida Steinberg Memorial Award offered for the first time this year among the food sections was presented to Bernard Lieberman, chairman of the confectioners trade campaign committee. In the Metropolitan Division, the Mark Workman Memorial Trophy was presented to Al. Cutler. In the Young Business Men's Division the trophy for the best campaigner went to Alfred Noodelman. In the corporations division the vice-chairman's Challenge Trophy was presented to Gerald Wolfe, the first two-time winner of this award now and in 1956. The grand total of $3,350,045.17 raised in the 1960 Joint Campaign, is the largest sum of money ever raised in an annual campaign since the Joint Campaign was inaugurated in 1951 in behalf of the Combined Jewish Appeal, United Israel Appeal, and the Rescue and Survival Fund. It is also the greatest amount ever realized in one campaign by any Jewish community in Canada, and represents an increase of close to $171,000 over the amount raised last year. The total number of contributors to this year's campaign will be 37,005 compared with 34,336 in 1959. The special names division, which takes in all contributions of $500 and up, raised a total of $2,300,096.50. The trades division, which covers 73 trades groups, $623,555; the corporations division, which solicits funds in the community-at-large specially earmarked for the agencies of the Federation of Jewish Community Services, $167,059; the metropolitan division, $25,575.15; the Young Business Men's Division, $23,096; the employees division which also solicits funds for Federation agencies only, $36,483.68; the Women's Division, $185,000. Enrolling new contributors, the synagogues division raised $3,953; the Societies Division, $2,824. The Youth Division raised $10,010.78. A special presentation of an engraved silver mezuza, a Jewish religious wall amulet, was presented to Arthur Pascal, general chairman, by Abe Bronfman, honorary chairman of the Combined Jewish Appeal, who praised Mr. Pascal for his "tremendous job of building the campaign organization and achieving maximum results within a limited period of time." This was the first time that the Joint Campaign drive was successfully completed by the end of the designated official period. Another surprise presentation was made to Mr. Pascal by Samuel Bronfman, honorary chairman of the Joint Campaign, who draped Mr. Pascal with a special ribbon which proclaimed "mission accomplished" in recognition of the chairman's inspiration to all campaign workers this year to be men and women with a mission. Other special presentations which were made to these associate chairmen: Gordon Brown, special names division; Ben Block, trades division; Reuben Ross, campaign planning committee; Jacob M. Lowy, real estate and land section, and synagogues division; Mrs. Joseph Cohen, Women's Division. Head table guests at the closing dinner included: Dr. Harry J. Stern, Rabbi, and Mrs. Stern, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Pascal, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Bronfman, Mr. and Mrs. Monroe Abbey, Mr. and Mrs. Abe Bronfman, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Cohen, Mr. and Mrs. Reuben Ross, Mr. and Mrs. Percy Caplan, Roger Robert, Mr. and Mrs. Nathan Gaisin, Mr. and Mrs. Allan Bronfman, Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Brown, Mr. and Mrs. Ben Block, Mr. and Mrs. Jacob M. York Times. The team of archaeologists — including twenty-seven American teachers and graduate students, an Australian, and four Jordanians — believe they have assembled an accurate dating scheme covering the period between the time of Alexander the Great and some fifty years after the death of Christ. This has been assembled from pottery fragments, coins, jewelry and other objects.

The dating system, it is believed, will allow archaeologists to fix in time other material recovered from this period of history. Archaeological work at Shechem will resume in 1962, the announcement from Harvard said.

position with disarmament proposals it knew the Soviet Union would not accept, and has at the same time continued its defense programs.

Diplomatic reports from Israel and the United Arab Republic leave no doubt that both countries would like to reduce their armaments burdens. While Israel has made steady progress toward becoming an industrial nation, she still is far from the goal of paying her own way without gifts from outside. The United Arab Republic, meanwhile, is engaged in a tremendous struggle to raise its standard of living.

Many premature babies are born in Canada and, to save their lives, great care is needed, usually including the regulated temperature of an incubator. There would be less danger of premature birth if all mothers were given medical care by their doctor, or the prenatal clinic all through pregnancy.

MAZEL TOV

made from sweet Concord grapes by the most famous name in Canadian winemaking!

Years of planning It took more than three years, after the decision was taken to introduce a kosher wine, before the first beautiful decanter of "Mazel Tov" was placed on the market. The strict details of Kashruth had to be arranged with the rabbis, and elaborate testing and research undertaken. From all this came "Mazel Tov"—a wine we are proud to offer from coast to coast in Canada.

Delicious "heimish" flavour This sweet rich wine in its beautiful decanter bottle recaptures the taste you used to know. It is the wine you sipped at the Pesach seders, the wine beside the candles at the Sabbath meal, the wine you made Kiddush with at Yom Tov, and the wine with which you toasted "L'chayim" at every simcha. "Mazel Tov" is a wine you'll "remember" with pleasure as you drink it. It's a wine that says "Mazel Tov" on your lips, as in the glass.

Seminary Gets Bene Israel Documents

Two historical documents relating to geneology and religious rites of the Bene Israel, a 2,000-year-old Jewish community in Bombay, India, were donated to the Library of The Jewish Theological Seminary of America by Shalome Haeem Rajpurker, Kazi, the community's head. One of the legal documents, dated 1799, signed by the principal leaders of the community, reconfirmed the rights of the Kazi and nullified a specific religious act since it had been performed in his absence. The second document of 1808 confirmed the rights and privileges of Kazishio, an hereditary leadership which was originally conferred upon three pupils and their descendants by the 18th century Jewish religious revivalist, David Rahabi. Written on parchment, it is the only extant document of its type.

Divergent views are held concerning the origin of Bene Israel, whose present membership numbers 21,000. In spite of its isolation from the mainstream of Jewish life, the community managed for many centuries to preserve Jewish religious laws and practices. With the gradual decline of spiritual guidance and literature, there remained only the fundamental observances such as Sabbath, circumcision, and dietary regulations. It was the observance of these fundamentals that convinced David Rahabi, an Egyptian Jew, that the Bene Israel were of Jewish origin.

The documents were presented to the Library through the Honorable B. B. Benjamin, former Under-Secretary, Ministry of Commerce and Industry in the Indian Government; president of the Jewish Welfare Federation of Delhi and Northern India; and a leader of the Bene Israel community.

Bank Of Montreal Earnings Show Substantial Gain For Year; Deposits Set New Record

Bank of Montreal resources reached a new high during 1960 and new records were set in almost every phase of the bank's operations, according to its 143rd annual statement for the year ended October 31, issued this week.

B of M assets rose more than $225 million to $3,485 million during the year, while loans in all categories maintained the 1959 peak of $1,773 million.

Total deposits were shown at $3,200 million, an increase of $202 million, or 6.7 per rent, from 1959, and were the highest in the bank's history. The expansion was largely attributable to Canadians' personal savings and to foreign deposits.

Quick assets of $1,771 million, or $193 million more than a year earlier, reflected the traditionally strong liquid position of the bank. This amount represents almost 54 per cent of all B of M liabilities to the public, against 51.8 per cent in 1959.

Earnings before taxes were at the record figure of $31,578,780. But $17,352,044 — equal to 55 per cent — was earmarked for taxes, so that the net profit for the year's operations of more than 840 B of M offices at home and abroad was $14,226,736. This was $2,935,676 more than in 1958.

The bank's 21,000 shareholders are receiving $2.00 par share — or $12,148,167 of the year's net profit — 15 cents more than the 1959 figure of $1.85, and 35 cents more than the $1.85 paid in 1958.

The balance, plus $1,072,290 of undivided profits from 1959, comprised a total of $3,150,859. Of this amount, $2 million was transferred to the rest account, leaving current undivided profits of $1,150,859.

The transfer of $2 million from undivided profits brought the B of M's "rest" — or reserve — account to $141,850,000. This, plus paid-up capital of $60,750,000 and the remaining undivided profits, brought total shareholders' equity to the record figure of $203,750,859.

A sharp increase of more than 18 per cent in the statement's valuation of B of M premises — from $47 million in 1959 to more than $55 million — reflected completion of the bank's new head-office building in Montreal, as well as the continuing rapid pace of branch extension and modernization.

Nachum Sokolow, Master Of The Literary Portrait

BY ITZHAK IVRY, OF THE JEWISH AGENCY FOR ISRAEL, IN NEW YORK

Undoubtedly, Sokolow's most valuable and highly remarkable literary legacy is concentrated in the three volumes of his pen portraits of great personalities ("ISHIM") whom he knew and admired for many years. Most of these pen portraits he wrote late in his life, although some of them he composed as a young man. A final version was eventually published in 1935, in Tel Aviv. In these masterful essays he appears as a real artist both in style and description. Sokolow's analysis of the essential qualities of his heroes are masterpieces. Most of the heroes are many-sided, complicated, and often mysterious souls, like Sokolow himself. In his essay about Eliezer Ben-Yehuda, he does not choose the path of the obvious, and doesn't call Ben-Yehuda the 'creator of the Hebrew language.' Sokolow says: "How miserable the Hebrew language would have been if it were the work of one great man or another. Any exaggeration in this direction is not only a sign of ignorance, but also an attempt to degrade our national language to the level of Esperanto. True, the great writers improved our language. But they did not create it from nothingness. The creator of the language is the people."

But at the same time, he feels that Ben-Yehuda is more than just a stubborn fanatic preaching the revival of the Hebrew language and working on a mammoth Hebrew dictionary with a simplicity and directness that does not recognize any problems or difficulties. Ben-Yehuda has also in his personality a highly mysterious part which is, nevertheless, an integral part of his character:

"You can feel that this frail man is inwardly a giant and that there is a real fiery spirit in him which accompanies him on all his ups and downs through life. You cannot explain this rationally, and you cannot rationally understand why such a man is able to devote himself, all his life, to one ideal without compromise and with a fanaticism which has the quality of an eternal flame, pure and devoid of any sludge of politics or showmanship. Rationality and cleverness cannot explain his great devotion to our language, and it is a fact that his enemies and all the blows of fate could not weaken his spirit, but only added to his energy and self-assurance. This proves that in the very essence of his personality, he is tied to a Messianic vision, which has developed in him delicate senses and quiet heroism, a mysterious force.

"The lifelessness and disuse of the Hebrew language have evoked in him the same holy sadness which is felt by really religious Jews at the calamity of the exiled Shechina. But while such sadness marks helpless sorrow and neglect, his sadness has been of great influence and fruitful initiative. The torments of his soul have a Promethean loftiness, and nothing of the wishy-washy sentimentality of the generation of 'Measfim' who were weeping in a flowery language and copying biblical phrases, bewailing the 'one and only' remaining language. Such sentimentality is the twin-sister of flattery, and, as Carlyle once said, the materia prima of Satan who turns it immediately into dullness and exhaustion, eaten by the rot of desperation, into something abstract and a result of passing taste, something passing which was never hammered on the anvil of the people, and never included in the imprint of a land. Not so Ben-Yehuda's mental torment, which comes from mysterious promptings of the soul, from deep values and heroic feelings. This is the secret of Ben Yehuda, and in this way his simplicity and mysteriousness merge."

It would lead us too far to probe further into Sokolow's attempt to analyze the mysterious force behind Ben Yehuda's inner drive, but it is typical of Sokolow's approach to Jewish history and to great Jewish personalities that he finds a prototype and an archtype for Ben-Yehuda in not too distant Jewish history, and this is Samuel David Luzzato, who comprehended the national idea in a spiritual way, and bravely fought against external reform, and against assimilation. He also was the pioneer of Hebrew speech, and a great lover of the Hebrew language himself, a unique mixture of simplicity and mysticism alike. Sokolow, the great globe-trotter who lived a long life, visited many countries, and met many people says:

"In Italy, I found that Luzzato used to speak Hebrew to his pupils. In Padua, I met many times the late Rabbi Samuto, who spoke a wonderful Hebrew, exact and beautiful of sound. He was one of the last devoted pupils of Luzzato. He and Ben-Yehuda were a product of different periods and environments, and, to a degree, of different cultures. They didn't know each other and weren't influenced by each other. But there is one great thing mutual to both of them, mutual to all of us, and to which each of us contributed, in greater or lesser degree in this or that field."

Here, Sokolow's main ideology is clearly discernible. We emphasized his words 'mutual to all of us' because Sokolow, while writing about Ben-Yehuda, wrote also about himself, and while being so different from Ben-Yehuda, had one quality in common with him: unbounded love for the Hebrew language and for Jewish spirituality. He also shared with him a readiness to devote his untiring efforts, to the last, to the revival and the constant progress of the Hebrew language and of Zion.

In his essay on Baron Edmund de Rothschild, whose collaborator and friend he was for many years, Sokolow's other love, his love of Zion, comes to the fore in a very touching manner. Again, Sokolow is attracted not by the phenomenon of philanthropy as such, but by the mysterious force behind Baron Edmund de Rothschild's devotedness to Eretz Israel, and to the upbuilding of the Jewish land. He says:

"The Baron never 'proclaimed' his nationalism, he just fulfilled the 'mitzvah' of nationalism by establishing colonies in Eretz Israel! He did not 'proclaim' redemption, he just helped to make possible an earlier redemption! He served as a symbol and an example for a whole generation. He believed that there is a future for the Jewish people only in Eretz Israel, and in this respect he was a lonely voice in his family, as well as in his community. For him it was not a matter of philanthropy only. Even a millionaire cannot give away hundreds of millions with no end in sight, and with expenditures much higher than income. Moreover, the Baron not only gave millions, he also worked and struggled hard with his brain and heart and all his nerves. He tried, day by day, to solve problems of colonization, of irrigation, and to correct mistakes of his officials in Palestine.

"What had this Parisian nobleman and millionaire in common with Jews of Rumania, and Ukraine whom he never learned to know and understand? What advantage and what glory was it for him to give up his big business and his art hobbies, and devote his energies to land reclamation and irrigation, and to the destruction of the various insects and fungi on some dry piece of land in Yesod Hamaaleh?

"Baron Rothschild speaks a perfect Parisian French. He knows very little German and no Yiddish, but when he speaks about a Jew who changed his religion, he will never call him 'baptised' but will use the old Yiddish-Hebrew expression, 'geshmadt'. And it is hard to describe how much disgust and abhorrence he expresses in pronouncing this word! You hear the echo of the voice of Frankfurt-am-Main from the Middle Ages, and of all other Jewish ghettoes of those generations. All politeness and quietude, all fragrance and pleasantness of the beautiful palaces disappear, and before us rises the Jewish 'no,' like a tower which rises to the sky. All the negation of generations to the change of religion; a deep internal shock which froze into one syllable without lightning and thunder. No protest, but also no defense, or attempted self-analysis; 'geshmadt', and finished. All the Jewish ire which was absorbed into the blood of generations, like a lava contained in the depths of a volcano; a word that expresses the mood of many generations.

Once, the Baron spoke to Sokolow about the future of Jews in the Diaspora and his words became sad indeed: "My heart is full of anxiety," he said, "about the future of 'this thing' for which so many generations suffered so much. We thought that our family was a citadel of strength, but we were mistaken. When even in my nearest family cases of 'shmad' erupted, I became convinced that this citadel is also a 'house of spider's web; not to be relied upon. We tread on a volcano, and when I remember that 'this thing' is in danger of being lost, I cannot find peace. It seems to me that the only guarantee for 'this thing' is in Eretz Israel."

And Sokolow concludes: "Yes, the Baron is old and the high ramparts of old age are closing in on him, and his iron will is breaking to pieces, but sometimes, when the lightning strikes, he voices some words of genius, like an echo of prayers of the First Chassidim, which are full of the courage of words spoken to the end, and which are inscribed indelibly because it entered the Jewish heart through torture and pain, in which Israel grows as in a rising river."

Again Sokolow gazes at the long chain of generations, and in the old, creased face of Baron Edmund de Rothschild he sees the image of one of our First Fathers. Another great portrait is that of Chaim Yechiel Bornstein, a lifelong friend from Warsaw, a great scholar, mathematician, and astronomer, self-taught and self-educated like so many of Bornstein's Jewish contemporaries in Eastern Europe of that time, like Nachum Sokolow himself. This essay is not only a masterpiece in psychological analysis of the Jewish genius, it is also a masterpiece in the description of a great Jewish autodidact. Sokolow says:

"The Bornsteins are never given a diploma, a gold or silver medal, and generally, they never 'finish' their studies. 'Finishing' studies is a term strange to us. When you study the Torah, you do not 'finish' it; you study it all your days. When you are ordained to the rabbinate, you are ready to issue judgements, but you do not 'finish' studying. Bornstein's studies and his scientific accomplishments were a victory of the total autodidact in his war with the environment and with himself. But he was not only an auto-didact and a great engineer, he was also a greater writer and linguist. Hebrew words were not for him just like words of any other language; they were for him the letters of the Book of Creation of the Jewish national genius. When he was writing in his rich and fresh language, in pure and exemplary Hebrew, full of the essence of the Bible, and drawing from the great literature of all generations, he felt revived as if his soul joined something mighty and eternal in Israel."

Those touching words about Bornstein, the Hebrew writer, could well be applied to Sokolow himself. And here are a few quotations from the wonderful essay on Bornstein which can best serve as a memorial to Nachum Sokolow himself:

"For fifty years he tirelessly brought us his books and articles which were full of content. His inkwell was like a fruitful vine, like a tree planted on the waters of Torah and wisdom. He never ceased giving fruit. In all this he was brilliant, reaching ever greater heights of accomplishment."

In his portrait of the Rathenaus, father and son, Sokolow unfolds the tale of the deep tragedy of the Jewish genius in foreign lands. He follows the Jewish roots and the mysteries of the Jewish soul in all the heroes of his portrait gallery. The characters are colorful and pulsating with vitality, but their innermost life-force is mysteriously connected to the sources of life of their people, to "The Thing" for which, in the words of old Baron Rothschild, so many generations went through untold sufferings.

In many respects the three volumes of "Ishim" are a 'song of songs' to the genius of his people, to the eternal and mysterious rejuvenation and regeneration of the ancient spirit of Israel. In many respects Nachum Sokolow himself represented this wonderful and constant rejuvenation and regeneration of the spirit. On the threshold of eighty he was full of the zest of spiritual life and creativity. He considered himself a writer first and last. But he was to his people much more than a brilliant writer and a rare scholar with a phenomenal store of knowledge. Prof. Tchernovitz (Rav Tsafr) once termed him in the traditional phrase, "Ish Ha-Eshkolot — Ish shekol bo!"; ("A man in whom all is contained.")

He will long be remembered as one of the greatest spirits of Jewish renaissance and of modern Hebrew language and culture. His name will be cherished as that of a great publicist and statesman, and even more so as the great painter of the Jewish genius; of the Jewish collective soul, and of great Jewish personalities in whom this collective soul manifests itself in a thousand wondrous ways, again and again. In this living gallery, the artist himself will always hold a prominent place.

Mumps, like some of the other so-called childhood diseases, can be serious to an adult. German measles, a minor disease to a child, is dangerous to an expectant mother especially in early pregnancy.

Immunization against the various contagious diseases will help to prevent the illnesses and their after effects, sometimes more tragic than the disease itself. Some of these diseases, such as polio, may effect adults for whom immunization is important.
